"Sancia in Excelsis," Vent Creator," "Credo," "Sancia in Excelsis," vent Creator," "Credo," "Sancia," "Benedictis" and "Leans Del." Sketches of western North Carolina, histofica! and biographical, Illustrating principally the revolutionary period of Mecklebburg Rowan, Lincola and adjoining counties, accompanied with misbellaneous information, much of it never before published. By C. L. Hunter. This is a book of more than three hundred and lifty pages, that cannot fail to have an absorbing interest for the descendants of the men who declared for independence long before the colonists generally were prepared for it. The Alexanders, Polks, Wilsons, Jacks, Davidsons, Forneys, Whites, Harrises, and others of Tennessee, will in the pages of these "Sketches" find much that will excite them to a fresh love for those of their kindred "now dead and gone," who were the first on this continent to declare for liberty and for independence of the mother country. In the whole range of the history of our race, there is no movement upon which the people of Tennessee love to linger as they do upon that which initiated the revolution, and enimifiated in the glorieus battle of Kings Mountain. It is full of the spirit of adventure, of courage and unselfish devotion, which, inspiring noble men, made it possible for the great reputilic to exist, and in the form in which Mr. Hunter presents it, cannot fall to enkindle something of the old-time enthusiasm of which it is in part a rectial. It is sold by the author, price one dollar and a-half, and will be sent, possage prepaid, by addressing C. L. Hunter, Lowesville, Lincoln county, North Carolina. NASHVILLE.
